(Cambridge, 8 September 2008) The Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology presents a talk by student curators of the exhibit Remix:

Indigenous Identities in the 21st Century on Tuesday, October 7 at 5:30 PM. The curators, all Harvard students, will explore how Native Americans today are rooted in their past, but refuse to be buried by it. The student curators selected work by four contemporary Native American artists to appear in the exhibit, reflecting the many ways native peoples see themselves, and how others see them. The exhibit has been extended through October 19, 2008.

The speakers are Tanner Amdur-Clark , Caitlin Finch, and LeRenzo Tolbert-Malcom , three of the four student curators of the exhibit Remix: Indigenous Identities in the 21st Century. All are members of Native Americans at Harvard College (NAHC), the only Native American student group at Harvard. The exhibit is presented by the Peabody Museum with NAHC on behalf of the Ivy Native Council.

Native Americans At Harvard College

Native Americans at Harvard College (NAHC) seeks to provide social, intellectual and cultural activities for both Native students at Harvard and for other interested members of the Harvard community. NAHC works to educate the Harvard campus about Native issues and debunk popular misconceptions of Natives through our activities and events. Native Americans at Harvard College is the only Native American undergraduate club at Harvard. NAHC has existed under several names, and is one of the six oldest ethnic/cultural organizations at Harvard College.

About the Peabody Museum

The Peabody Museum is among the oldest archaeological and ethnographic museums in the world with one of the finest collections of human cultural history found anywhere. It is home to superb materials from Africa, ancient Europe, North America, Mesoamerica, Oceania, and South America in particular. In addition to its archaeological and ethnographic holdings, the Museum's photographic archives, one of the largest of its kind, hold more than 500,000 historical photographs, dating from the mid-19th century to the present and chronicling anthropology, archaeology, and world culture.

Location: The Peabody Museum is located at 11 Divinity Avenue in Cambridge. The Museum is a short walk from the Harvard Square MBTA station.

Hours: 9 AM to 5 PM, 7 days a week. The Museum is closed on Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, and New Year's Day. Admission is $9.00 for adults, $7.00 for students and seniors, $6.00 for children, 3-18. Free with Harvard ID or Museum membership. The museum is free to Massachusetts residents Sundays, 9 AM to noon, year round, and Wednesdays from 3 PM to 5 PM (September to May).
